The Governor's Prevention Partnership Launches Tool for Mentoring Programs Nationwide to Connect and Collaborate in their Local Communities

Regional Mentoring Collaboratives How-To Toolkit funded by Pitney Bowes Foundation

Wethersfield, CT – January 29, 2018. Last week, the Governor's Prevention Partnership announced the release of a significant resource to increase support for local mentoring programs. Funded through a grant from the Pitney Bowes Foundation and drawing on the organization's twenty years of experience in supporting mentoring programs, Partnership staff developed and launched the Regional Mentoring Collaboratives: A How-To Toolkit in Washington, DC at the National Mentoring Summit in front of workshop participants from over 30 states. The toolkit is designed to provide how-to tips and resources for mentoring programs and community leaders to start and implement a regional mentoring collaborative designed to coordinate youth mentoring services and work in partnership to address local needs like increased mentor recruitment, training and support and linkages to community resources.

In 2007, The Partnership approached the state legislature for the first round of start-up funding for the state's first regional mentoring collaboratives. Since that time, the Partnership has launched four additional collaboratives across the state supported by public and private funding. The Partnership provides oversight and technical assistance to local mentoring programs participating in each collaborative as well as evidence-based resources.

“We recognize that there is strength in numbers, and everything that we do as an organization is done through partnership,” said Jill Spinetti, president & CEO of the Partnership. “The mentoring program directors in each collaborative share support, best practices, new ideas and connection to resources so that mentoring is viewed as an effective, positive support for youth by community leaders.”

The Partnership operates regional mentoring collaboratives in Hartford, Stamford, Bridgeport, New Haven, and Eastern Connecticut (New London/Norwich).

“We are thrilled to have had the support of Pitney Bowes Foundation to make the roll-out of this resource possible,” Spinetti said. “Our goal was to share our experience and build communities of practice, so that more youth across the nation can be served by a caring mentoring relationship.”

In Connecticut, 1 in 3 youth could benefit from a mentor but do not have one.

“Pitney Bowes Foundation is proud to support the development of the toolkit and The Partnership’s work connecting mentoring programs across the state,” said Kathleen Ryan Mufson, Director, Global Corporate Citizenship & President, Pitney Bowes Foundation. “Given the tremendous need for additional mentors and for collaboration among the various stakeholders serving youth, Connecticut’s successful model will provide a clear road map for others to replicate.”

If you are interested in finding out how to start a regional mentoring collaborative in your community, please contact Hannah Granfield, Director, Mentoring Services at 860-757-3923.
